

REMARKS

Claim 22 has been amended in a sincere attempt to place the case in immediate condition for allowance. The claim now specifically calls for a transparent conductive layer formed on the transparent substrate film. All claims have been rejected under the first paragraph of 35 USC 112 based upon a non-enabling disclosure. The Examiner had stated that from her review of the application the transparent conductive layer was an important part of the invention; that element is now recited in the claims. The rejection should be withdrawn.

The Examiner is requested to telephone the undersigned should anything further be required in the case prior to allowance.

Respectfully submitted,
